

It is obvious even to the most casual observer, scores of social media channels are falling more and more into disrepute these days. Some very serious complaints have been directed towards them, but probably the most common is their clear bias towards people not part of their inner circle.

While this may be a valid objection, it would be unfair to deny there is some degree of bias also in those who make it! If you are one of those people, dear reader, you might find the following advice helpful.

Instead of focusing on the various opinions out there on any given subject, go first to God's Word, soak yourself in it continually, learn it off by heart from the first to the last page, and prayerfully seek the Holy Spirit for understanding and revelation. By this you will not only be less reliant on another's interpretation, but better equipped to weigh it!
